Your company or organization is invited to consider a unique partnership that will provide you with the opportunity to reach out to a wide range of members from the global community working with nanotubes and nanotechnology. Come and increase your presence within this community by participating in the upcoming 11th International Conference on the Science and Application of Nanotubes to be held at the Hilton Bonaventure, Montréal, Canada from June 26th to July 2nd, 2010.

The NT conference series, certainly the most important series in the nanotube field, and also a leading series in the nanotechnology field more generally, draw heavily from the U.S., Europe and Asia. By virtue of being in North America for the first time since 2004, NT10 will have a particularly strong contingent from the U.S. and Canada. The NT conference draws young scientists and established researchers. Some industry observers are also in attendance.

It is very likely that the exhibit at 11th International Conference on the Science and Application of Nanotubes will be the largest ever at NT Conference. It will mainly include suppliers to researchers, but governments and institutions are expected to be in attendance.

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

Scope

Nanotubes belong to a developing class of materials which are “quantum” sized in diameter and “macroscopic”-sized in length. As a result they exhibit a variety of fascinating properties and great promise in both fundamental research and practical application. This meeting will bring leading scientists in the area of nanotube science and technology together to evaluate past and define future trends of this exciting field. The conference will address progress at the frontiers of fundamental as well as applied research.

Format of the Conference

Purpose

The purpose of the 11th International Conference on the Science and Application of Nanotubes is to promote scientific progress, to stimulate free exchange of ideas, and to publicize progress in nanotube sciences.

11th International Conference on the Science and Application of Nanotubes is open to all interested and active in nanotube research.

Program format

In contrast with other conferences, Poster presentations represent the core of the NT10 conference as it occupies a significant portion of the program. This format provides a maximum exposure to contributed results, as attendees meet and exchange ideas in an informal setting.

Invited and contributed presentations fill the oral portion of the conference. Invited speakers are active leading researchers in the field of Nanotubes and are selected by an elected advisory board. Contributed speakers are chosen from poster contributions to acknowledge significant recent progress.

Topics receiving special attention include

- Mechanical properties of Nanotubes and Nanotube-based composites
- Electronic properties of Nanotubes and Nanotube-based electronic devices
- Optical characterization and optical properties
- Progress in synthesis
- Purification and sorting of Nanotubes
- Chemical processing and modification of Nanotubes
- Applications for carbon Nanotubes

In particular the Montréal International Jazz Festival overlaps in part with NT10. Montréal mixes European and North American elements. The two official languages, French and English, are used interchangeably by its diverse multicultural population. Montréal is also proud of its parks both in and around the metropolitan center, including the Mont Royal at the city center and the Botanical Gardens. Although being a very popular tourist destination, Montréal also welcomes almost 150,000 students in its four universities on a yearly basis.
